

Event poster tease

We decided to break up the two poster designs, the event and the show, to allow greater function for each as A, an event poster and B, an interactive snapshot of the event. The image shown left is an in-situ tease of the finalised event poster released on the event facebook page prior to printing taking place. The purpose of the post was to again add mystery to the event to build hype but to do so in a drip-fed manner.

Poster release

Once Aidan had risographed the final event poster we realised it to the event attendees. This was done so via this image shown left with information such as the location of the event and time, information that had not been released prior to the post. We also shared that we would be filming on the night and that showing up to the event meant that they content to being used in video material.
