George Greaves

Graphic designer George Greaves creates work that’s inspired by architecture and the built environments, drawing on influences that include Georgio De Chico, David Hockney, Matisse, Magritte and Escher.

The two pieces adhere to a duotone styling, allowing more complexity and emphasis with design rather than colours. Use of both natural textures and architecture creates a balance that's visually appealing to the viewer. Heavy-weight type helps information to stand out and clearly displays event information.

RAVE

Taking users to depths they possibly have never been to, RAVE takes a single individuals perspective and portrays it thought out the piece. The individuals themselves are never really the object of portrayal (although being heavily shown) but the rave itself through all means of the individuals expression.

Viewers feel as through they are inside of the experience itself, being acknowledged by every individual who comes in contact with the camera; directly addressing the users inside the lens as if to entice them to the very place being show in the piece.
