

Mood board

Outlining a mood board allows us to both share a clear visualisation of key themes that we would both like to include within the final piece. Themes can picked out and refined to build a larger part of the piece and referenced through this at a later date if needed.

Concept sketch

This sketch quickly describes our vision of the piece, allowing for communication with stakeholders to be more effective. Here you can see an individual interacting with three touch points (A, B and C) via a Makey Makes which would then show video in the spaces to the side of the poster (W, X, Y and Z). Projection was initially proposed to be the output method for the video but after discussions with technicians we came to the conclusion that projection was possibly not the best option but to use monitors instead. Testing will show if this is a viable.
