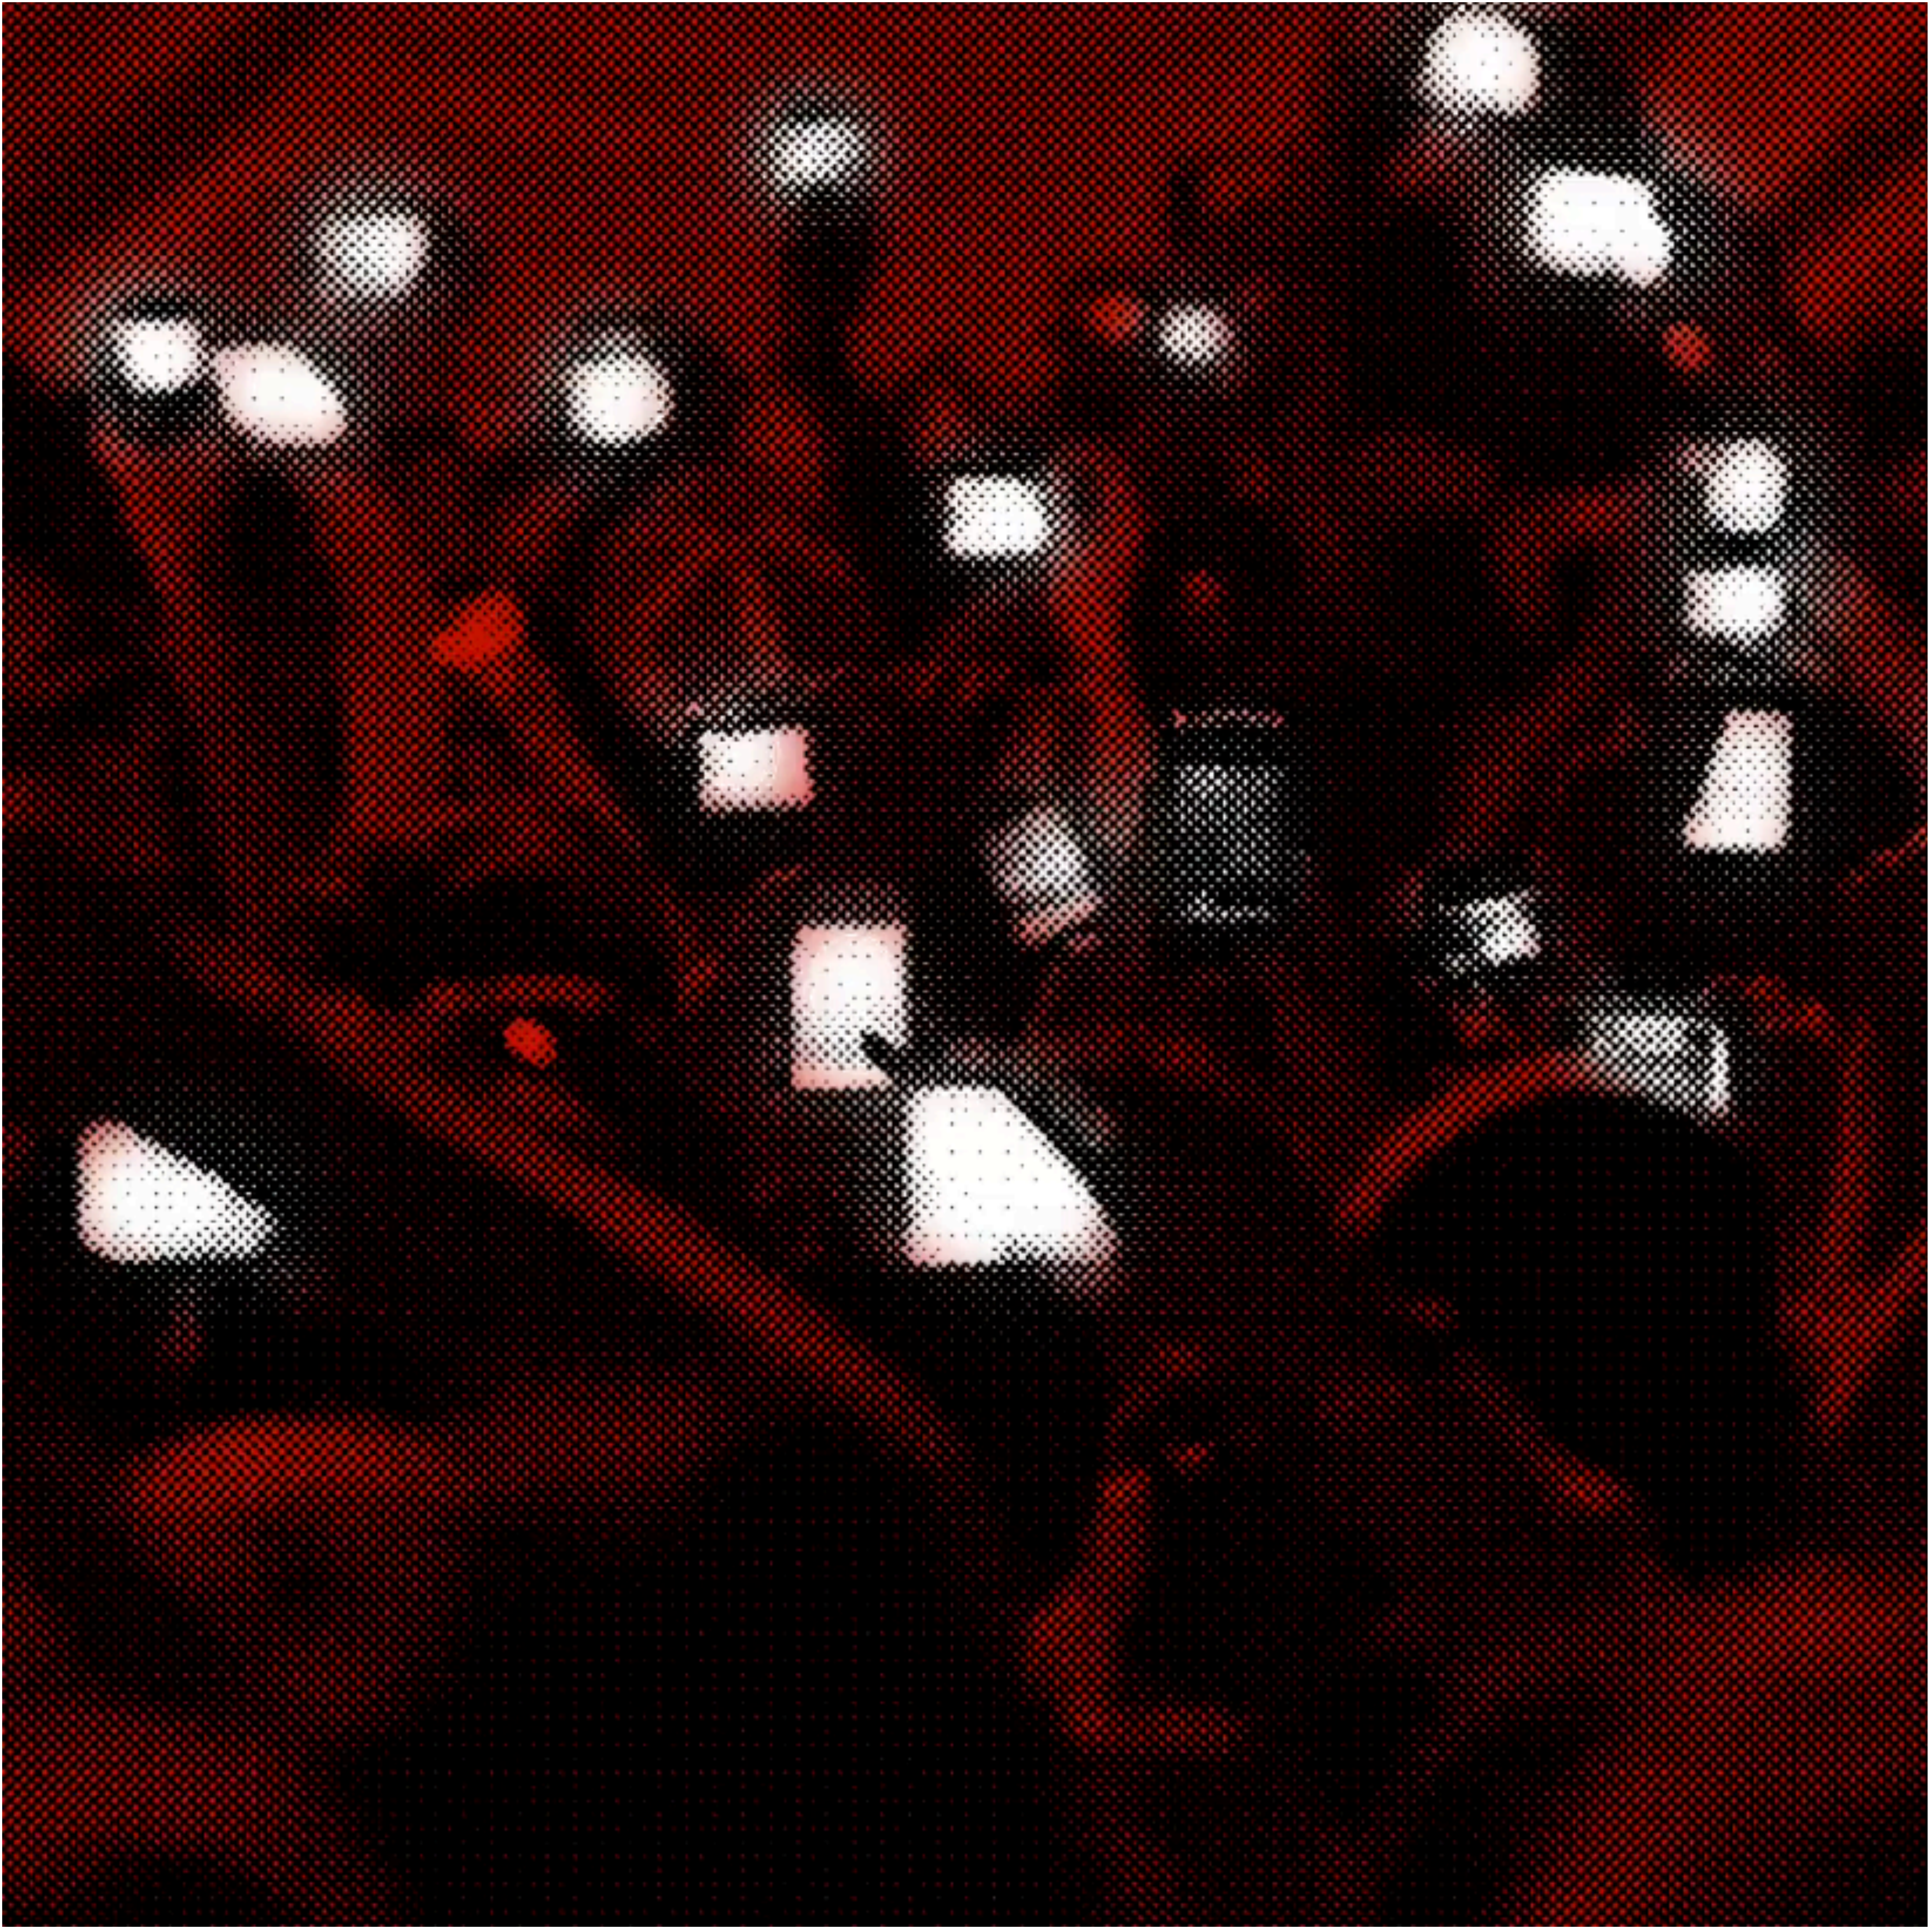
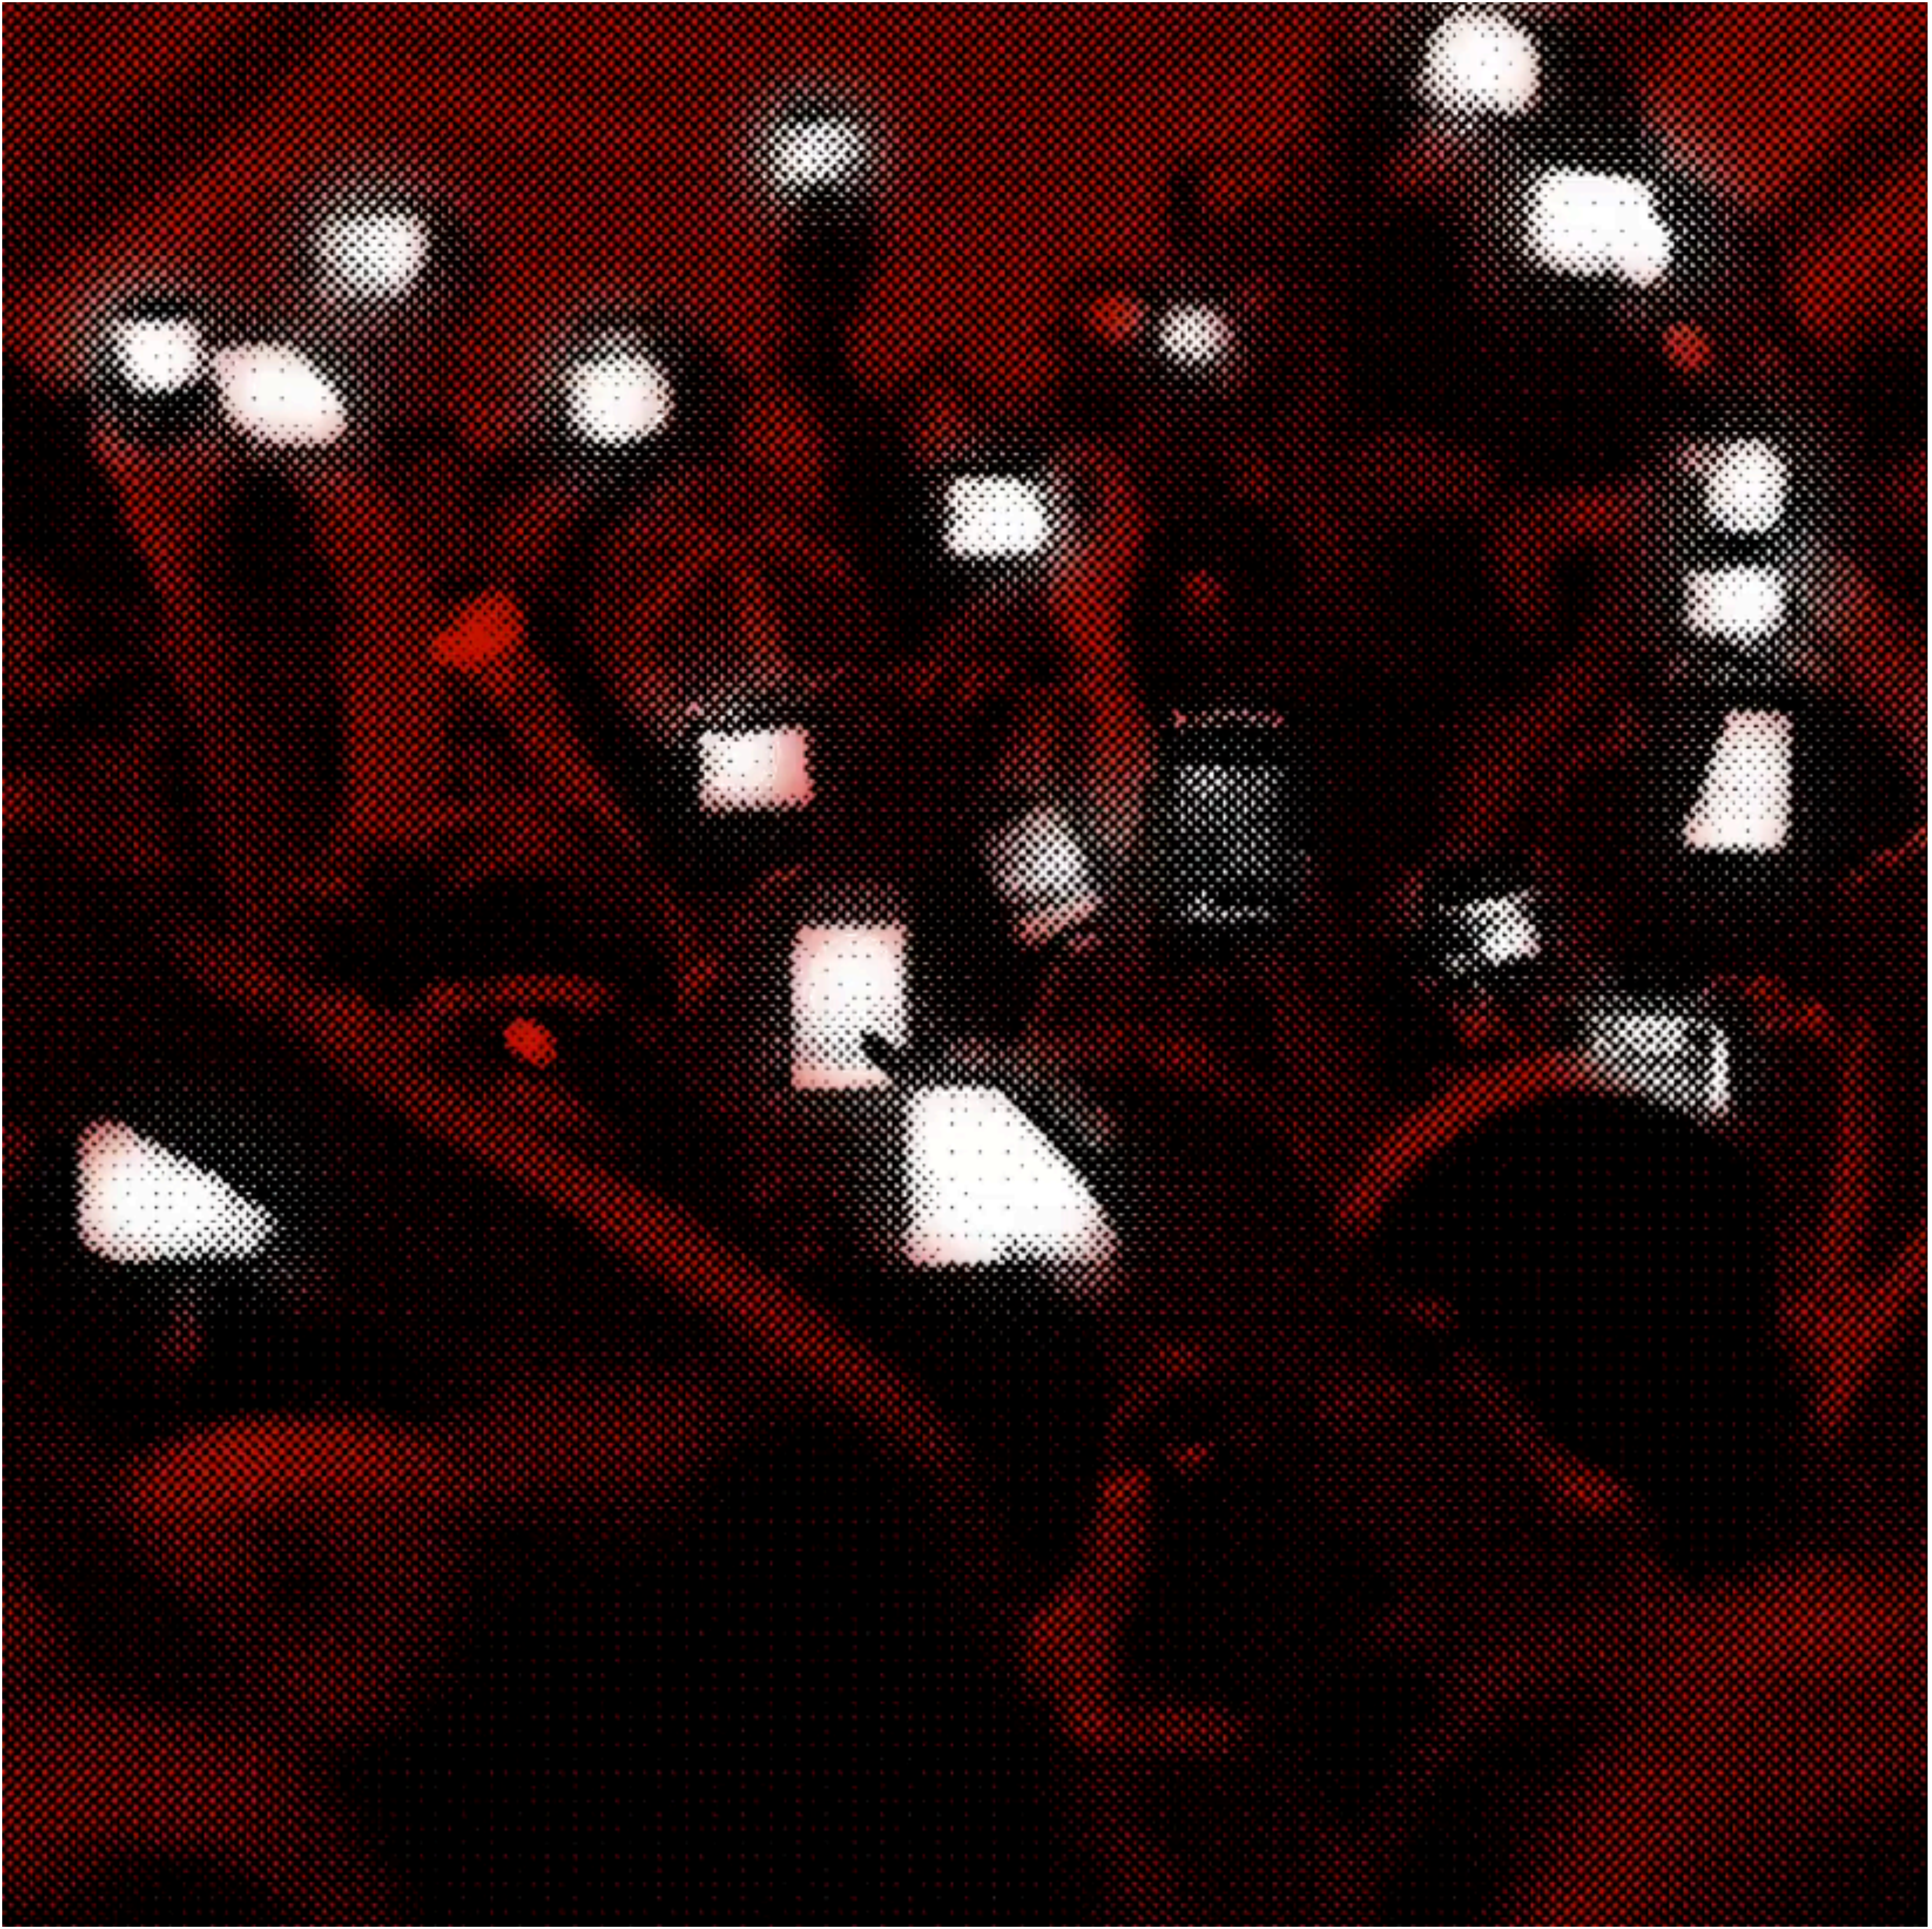
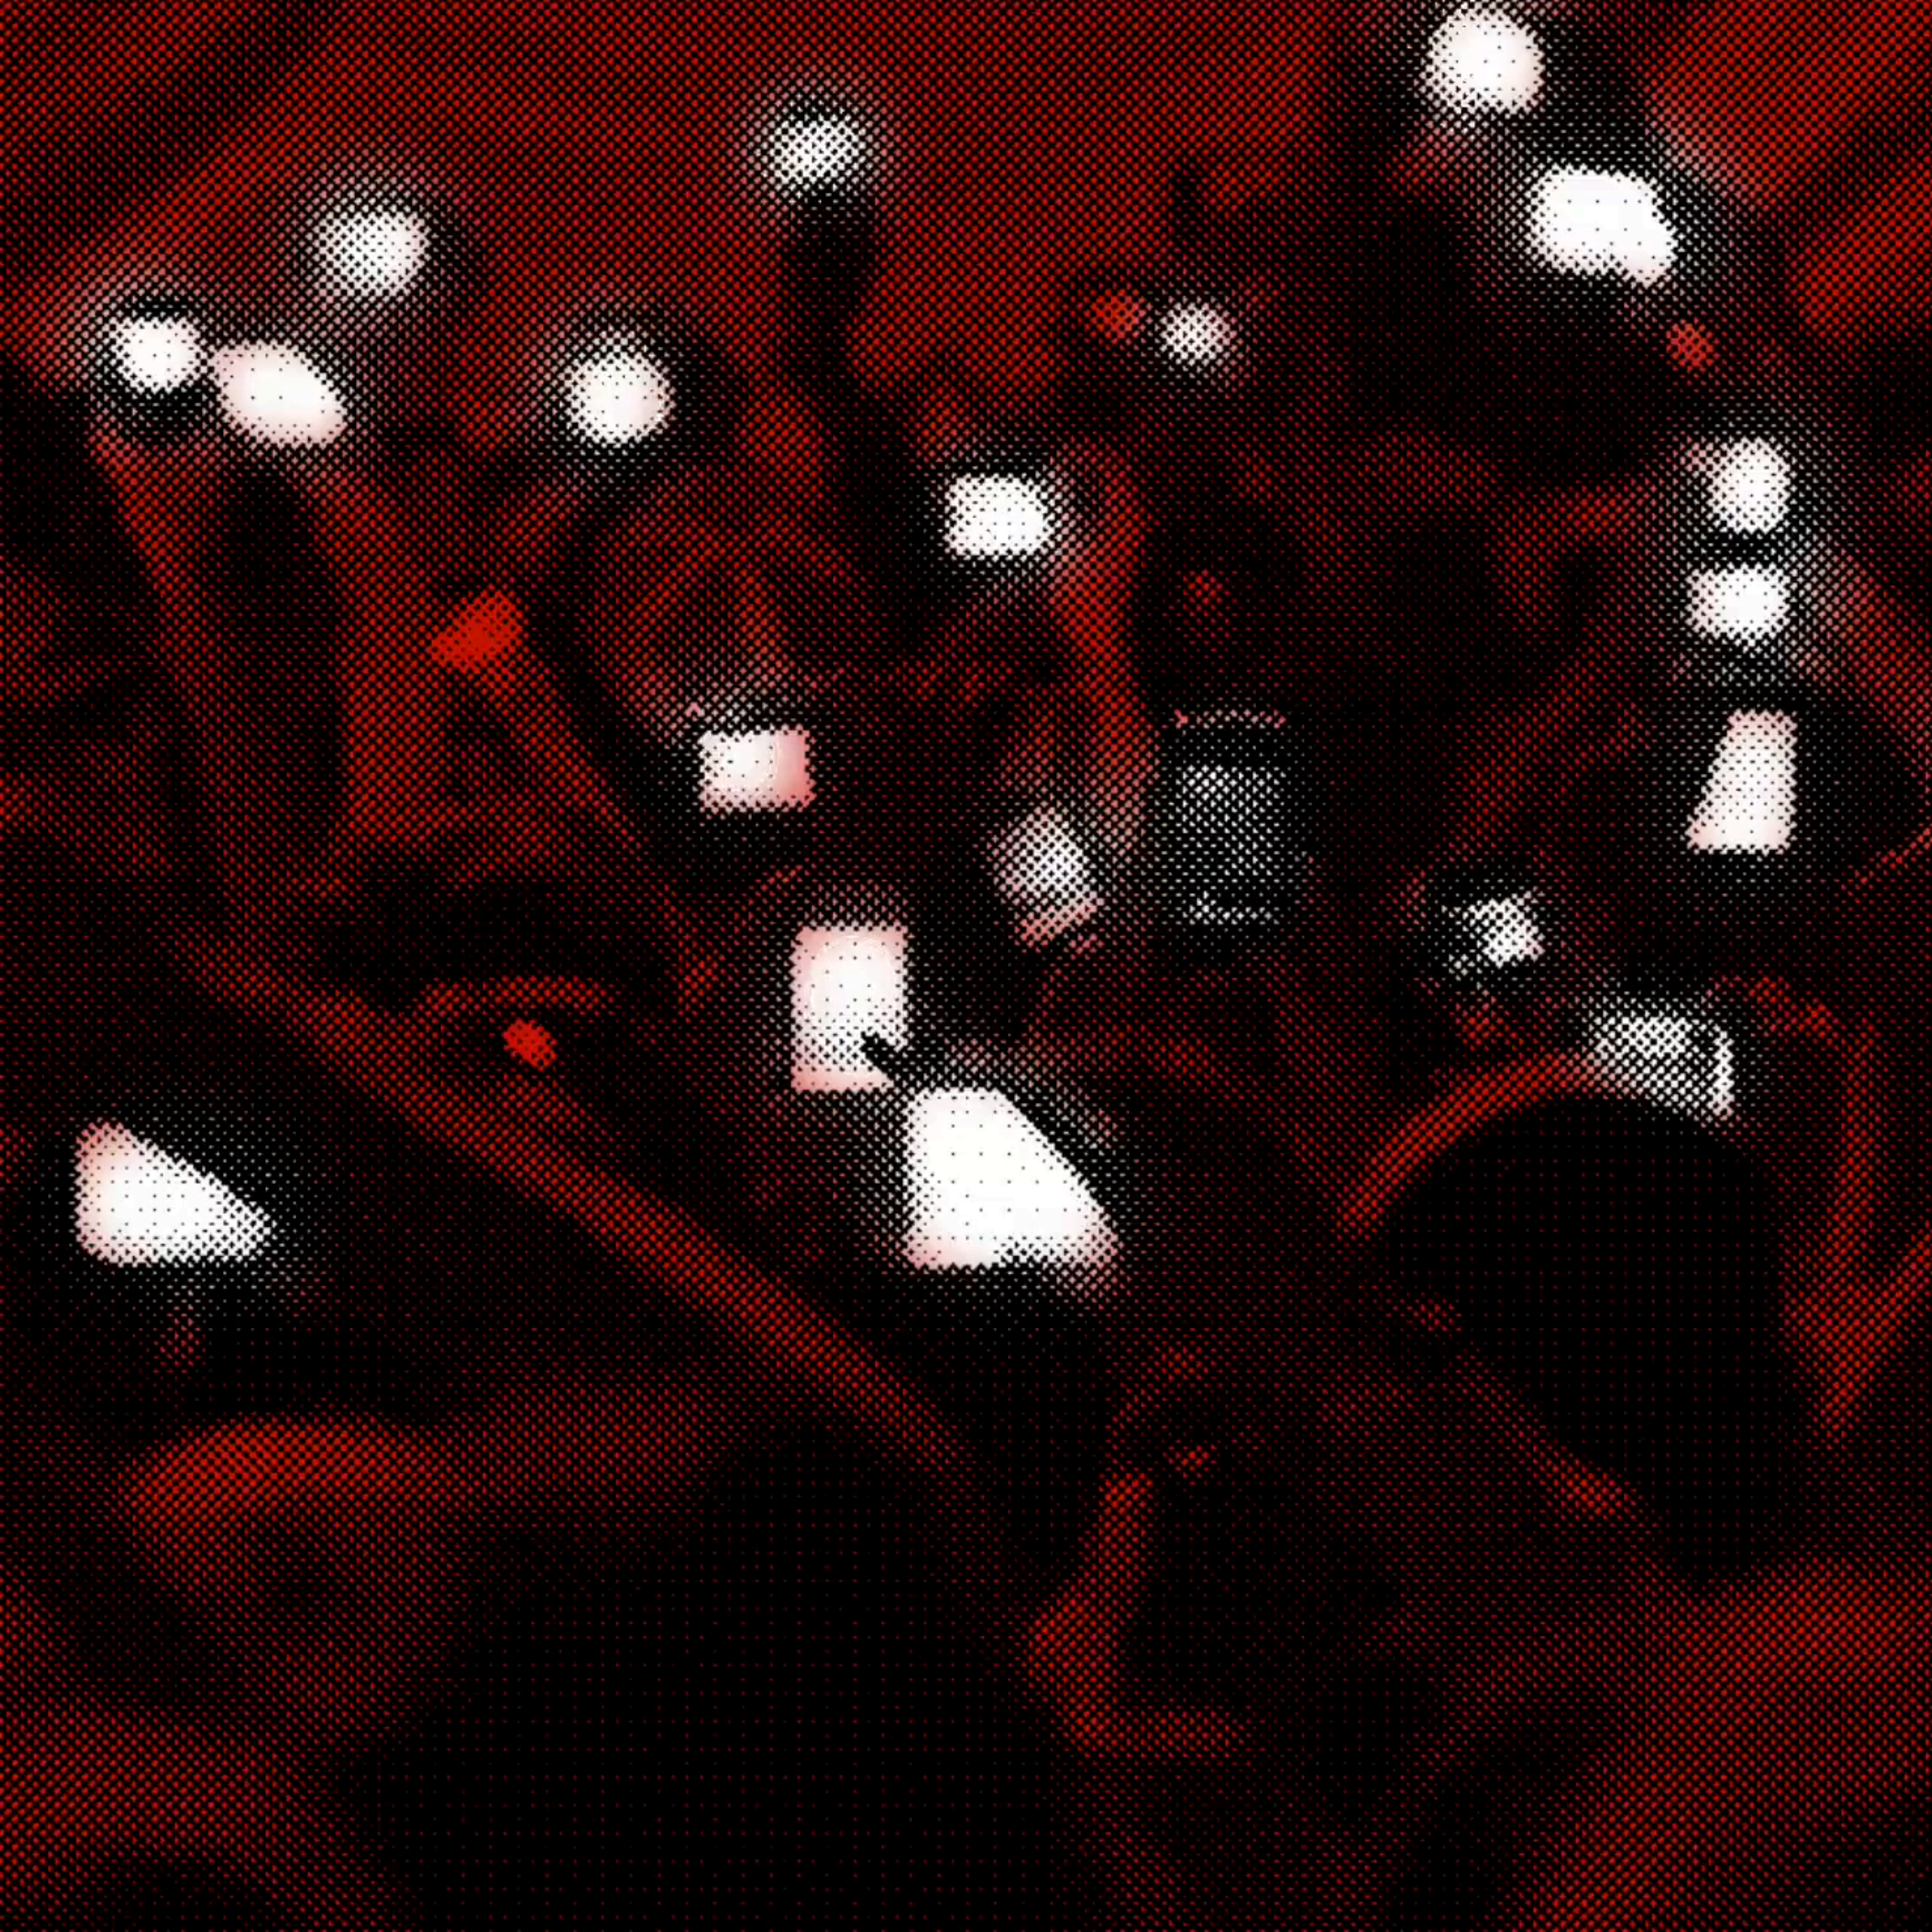
Event identity

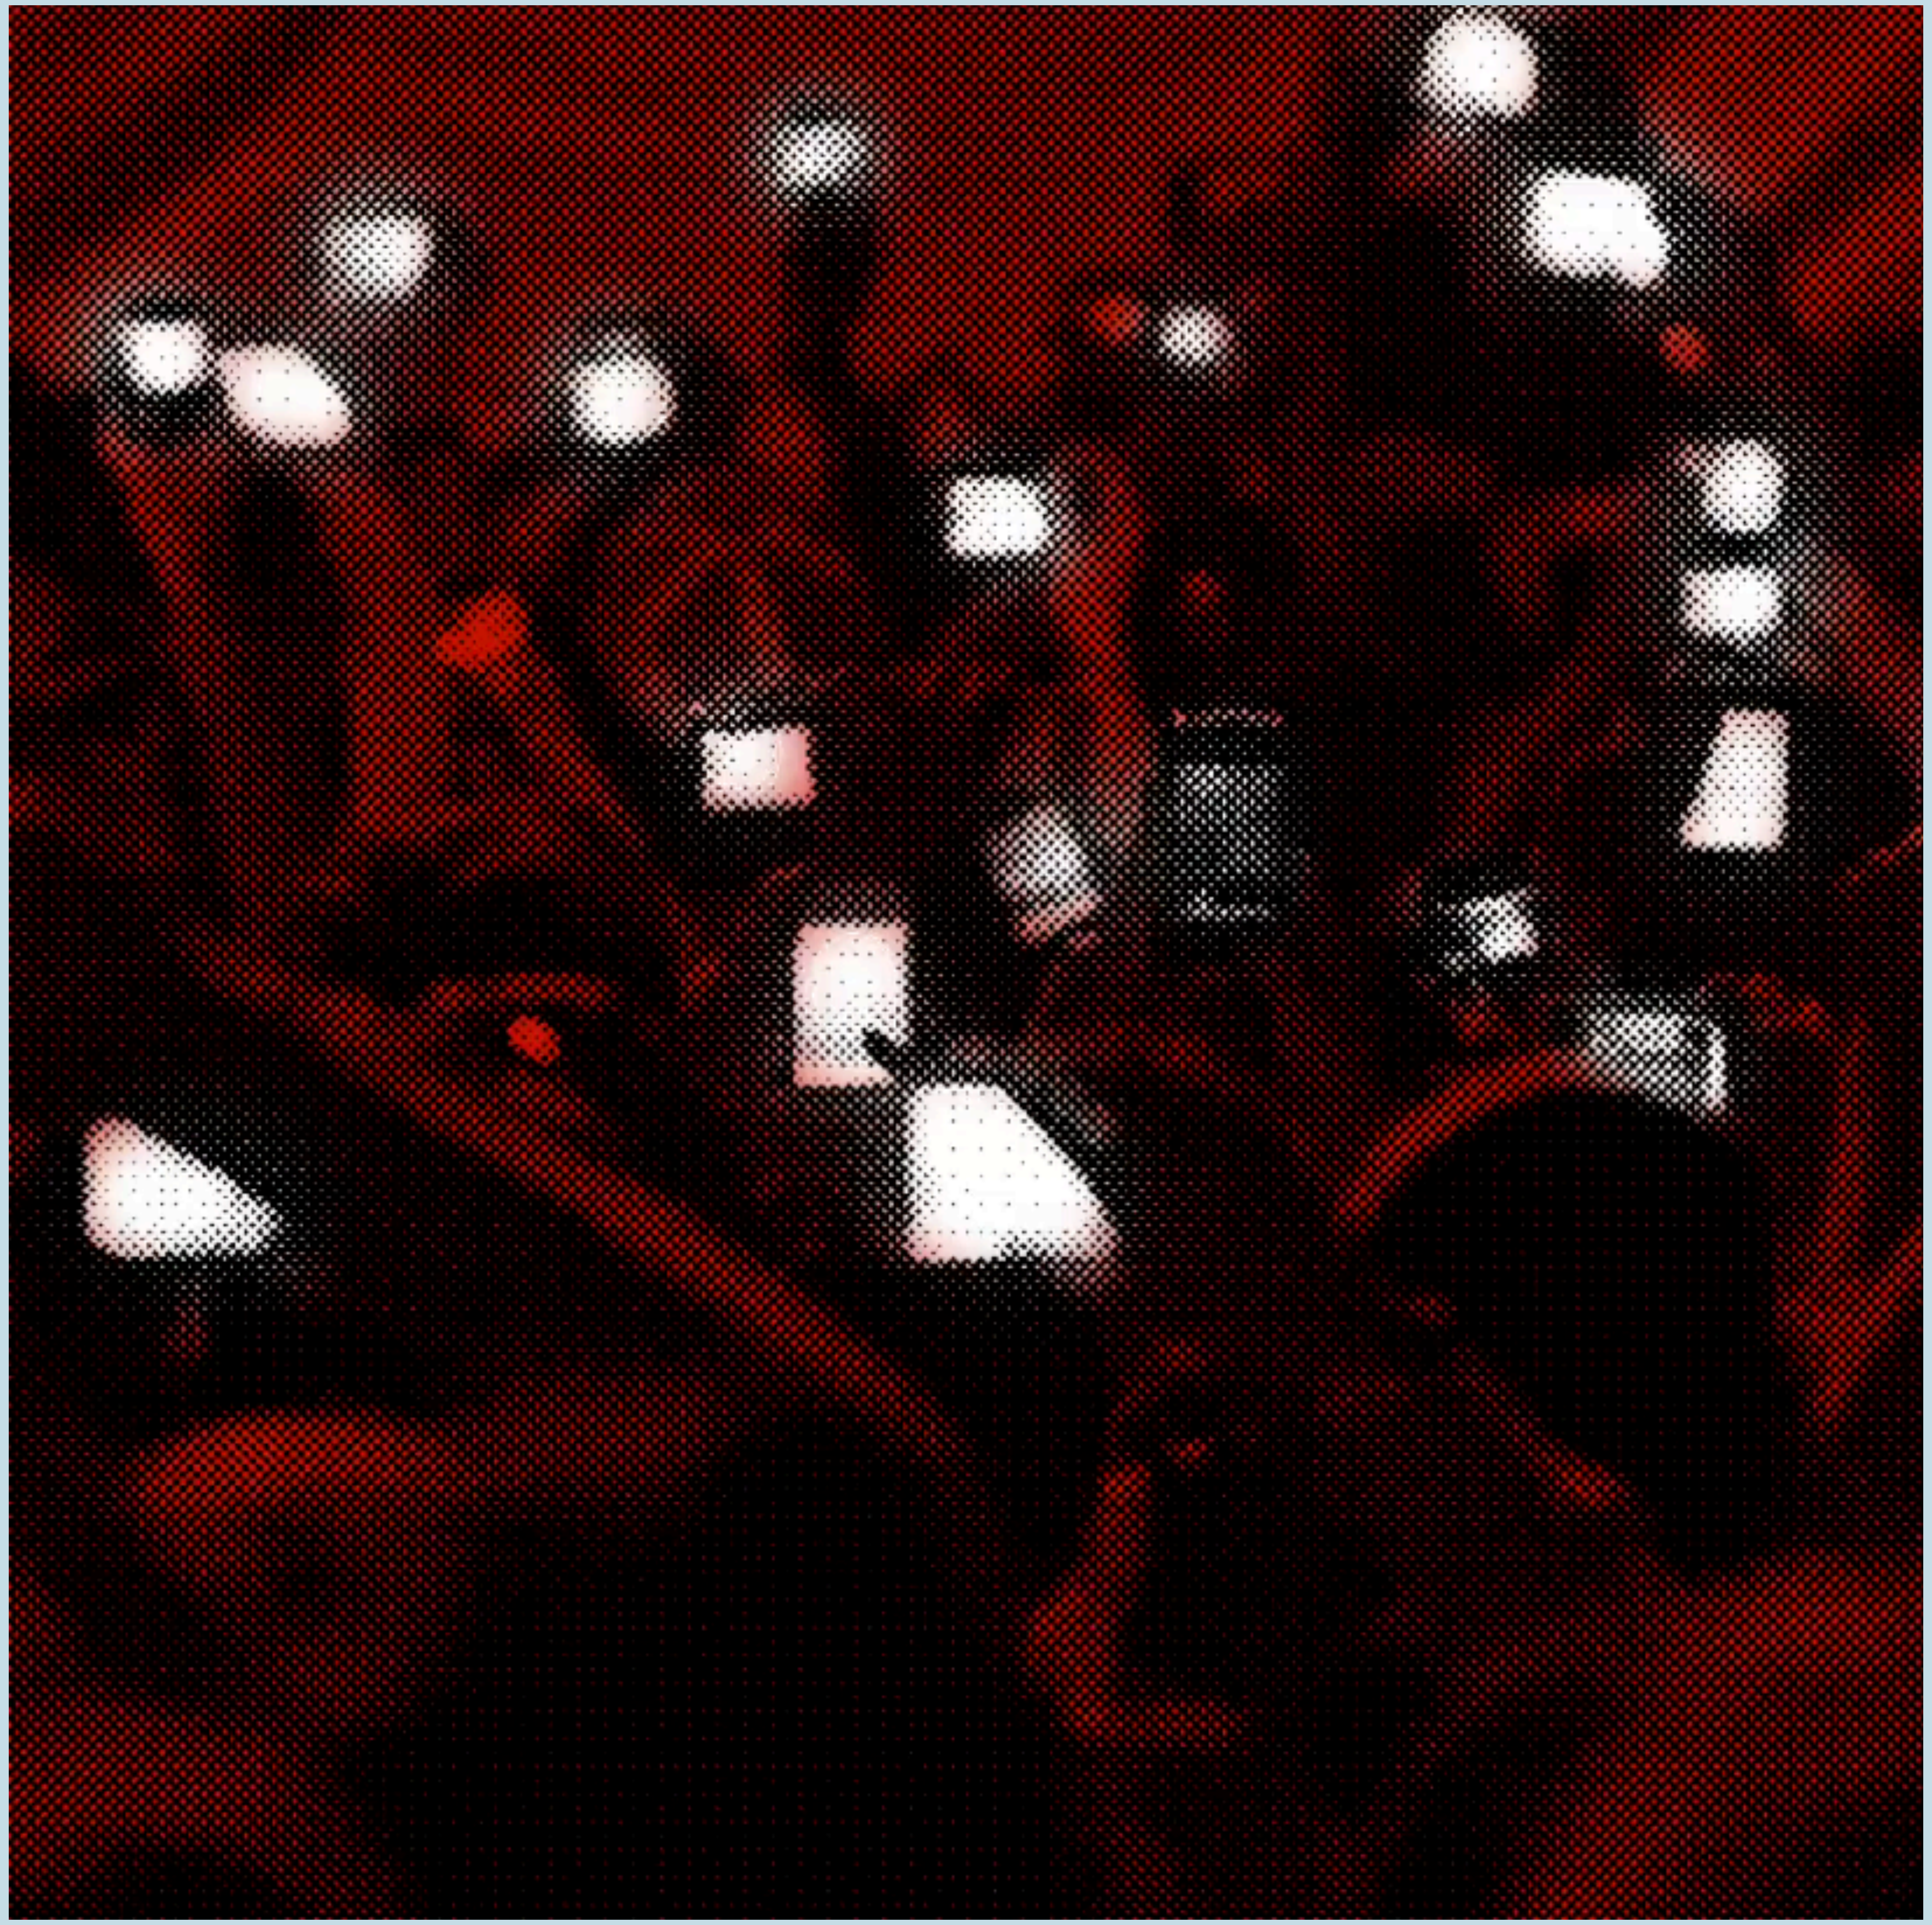
The loss of time and thought, or often described as “meditative states” that raves in the 90’s and those in countries such as Berlin produce is often done by the lack of time denoting elements such as clocks and the presence of natural light.

We have the ability to manipulate natural light but with the presence of mobile phones today it is very hard to disconnect from the outside world. As a result of this, we have asked for phones to not be used at the event via a post of the facebook page.









Event identity

The loss of time and thought, or often described as "meditative states" that raves in the 90's and those in countries such as Berlin produce is often done by the lack of time denoting elements such as clocks and the presence of natural light.

We have the ability to manipulate natural light but with the presence of mobile phones today it is very hard to disconnect from the outside world. As a result of this, we have asked for phones to not be used at the event via a post of the facebook page.

Event buildup

The image shown right was made by Aidan as a response to event participants asking us what to wear. Having the event being ambiguous and mysterious could have prompted this. The image was posted on the event page with the caption “Transcience is a night of individualism. No dress code.”; allowing participants to come naturally in a comfortable skin of their own choosing, aiding recording and staying true to the aim of capturing a culture of individualism through the lens of the rave.

THE STATE OR FACT OF LASTING ONLY FOR A SHORT TIME; TRANSITORINESS.